them with epithets of pro-Germanism. When the full effect of this obsolete charge is not apparent he adopts a second line of denunciation of entrenched power and shouts like a Bolshevik: "The day is past, thank God, when the American citizen can be swayed from duty by outworn war epithets."

He asserted that the president wrote in a secret treaty condemned not only by him, but by the righteous opinion of the world into the peace treaty. Wilson went to Paris boldly and bravely proclaiming that no people can be forced under a sovereignty under which he does not wish to live and that no territory must change hands except for the purpose of securing those who inhabit it a fair chance for life and liberty. The senator charged that the president abandoned these principles and abjectly surrendered to idealism and became a party to the secret treaties he denounced when he united in making them the basis of his action in Paris. He asserted that Wilson made us participants criminals in such frauds as Shantung was guaranteed by America's "treasure and blood by Article X in his treaty to the eternal preservation of infancy."

EMPTY BENCHES GREET WILSON

(By Associated Press)
PORTLAND, Maine, Sept. 12.—The world is waiting with war unless the peace treaty is accepted, said a speaker at President Wilson's arrival here. He spoke in a big tent which was not filled, and was introduced by Governor Davis, who is Senator Bush's home state.
The president said he could understand how there might be a disagreement as to the terms of the treaty, but was amazed that some wished to reject it altogether. America saved the world, now some proposed they desert the world. He said Germany desired the United States to stay out of the treaty.
He accused the pro-German element started up in this country coincident with opposition to the treaty. He said it was really believed pro-Germanism was purification of political affairs. It must favor the treaty. He termed the Boston police strike a crime.
